

Rewards & Recognition

Engaging for Civic Change

Rewarding and recognizing the new generation of volunteers is as important as rewarding and recognizing any volunteer.

However, researchers assert that Boomers and seasoned professionals are more interested in how their efforts are effecting change and advancing the organization's mission than personal recognition. They want to have their knowledge and experience recognized and put to use to support a cause important to them.